PICARD ANGST

Aggressive Mandate (USD) Q3 2026

Market Commentary

Q3 saw the Fed move from hawkish guidance to action. A renewed oil shock, driven by a Middle East conflict that lapsed into a standoff, kept inflation elevated. The FOMC held rates in July, then voted 12-0 in September to raise 25bps to 3.75-4.00%, its first increase since 2023. The median dot-plot for FY 2026 rose to 4.1% from 3.8%, with 16 of 18 participants expecting at least one further hike this year. August CPI held at 3.4% y/y, with energy prices, up 16.3%, explaining most of the gap to 2.4% core inflation.

Treasury yields rose 75-80bps across the curve, with the 2-year at c.4.88% and the 10-year at c.5.29%. The 10-year briefly traded above 5.34%, its highest since 2002. A weak $70bn 5-year auction, priced at 5.033% with the lowest bid-to-cover in almost nine years, pushed 5-year yields up c.20bps in one session. Hyperscalers also issued roughly $320bn of long-term debt through late August, c.70% of long-term Treasury issuance. J.P. Morgan projects $4.1tn of additional financing needs through 2030. The ECB and BoJ both hiked in September, to 2.50% and 1.25% respectively, the BoJ's highest since 1995. The Bank of England held at 3.75% and expects inflation above 4% in early 2027.

Global equities lost momentum as rate expectations moved against risk assets, with modest US gains masking sharply narrower leadership. Mega-caps led: the S&P 500 rose 2.3% while its equal-weight version fell 1.9%. The Russell 2000 fell 7.2%, giving back almost half its H1 gains. The AI trade rotated: software rallied 17% as disruption fears eased, while semiconductors fell 11% on profit-taking in earlier data-centre winners, though the largest chipmakers held up better. Earnings remained a key support: analysts raised estimates 1.4% over the quarter, with Q3 S&P 500 EPS now expected to grow 29.5% y/y, a third straight quarter above 25%.

Elsewhere, the STOXX 600 slipped 0.4% and MSCI EM fell 0.4% as Q2's leadership unwound. The Kospi fell c.19%, the worst major market, on selling in Samsung Electronics and SK Hynix. China's CSI 300 dropped c.12.5%, its steepest quarterly fall since 2022. The Nikkei 225 fell 4.7%, ending a five-quarter winning streak, while the yen stayed weak above 157 per dollar. The HSCEI bucked the trend, rising 7.6%.
Commodities reversed sharply. WTI peaked at c.$107/bbl in mid-September before closing near $90/bbl. Gold and silver gained c.4% and 3% for the quarter despite September falls of 6.7% and 9.3%, pressured by rising real yields and a firmer dollar. Copper extended its gains, setting a record LME cash close of $14,737/t on 8 September.
